

Step Into Second Grade . . . A Closer Look

Dear Families,

March 6, 2018

Hello! Welcome to another week of learning!

Reading: We are working on identifying the important themes we've been reading in beautiful pictures. Literature gives us the chance to remember life-long lessons of "Be Who You Are" "Believe in your Dreams" and "Never Give Up." We look closely at stories and reread them to find ways to support our opinion on what we think about the book's message.

Math: We will use our money-counting skills as we apply them in math story problems. We will also practice telling time to the ½ hour.

Writing: Let's combine our science unit with writing paragraphs about the forces and motion we use in our daily lives and on the playground.

Spelling: We have been so observant noticing how the "Bossy Letter R" is so loud in many words. For example: first, shark, harp, dark, start, and others. These are actually called r-controlled words.

Science: More fun with forces and motion and we will have a visit from the National Park Service to teach us about animal tracks.

Have a great week,

Jodi
